

RELATING TO OTHERS

GAME CHAT

When someone is mean or rude online

John and his older sister Jess were taking turns playing a game on their computer. They were both having a lot of fun.

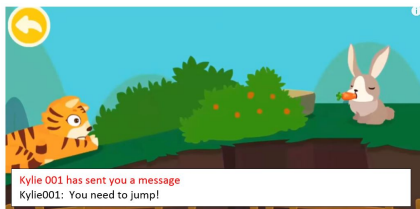

"You've got to jump and catch the rabbit John. Before he eats all the carrots".

A message popped up from someone calling themselves Kylie001.

It said "You need to jump!"

"Oh no!" said John. "I missed"

"My turn now" said Jess.

Suddenly another message popped up from Kylie. "Wow! You are so bad at this game! Ha ha!"

John started to get a funny feeling in his stomach.

"That's mean." said Jess. "Mum look at this. Dad says not to reply when people write mean things aye?"

Mum nodded and gave John a quick hug which made him feel better. Mum took a picture of the mean message on her phone. "If Kylie001 carries on like this we will have to report her." She smiled at John and watched as her children got back to enjoying their game.

EXPLORE!

When someone is mean or rude online.

Sometimes it is hard to know what to do when people say mean things.

Stop and ask yourself .... "What would my family want me to do?"

In the story we found out that Jess and her family believe it is important not to reply to people who say mean things online or offline. We also found out that Jess and John take turns when they play. These are their family values.

What is something that is important to your family?

With a partner ...

- Share one of your family values.
- Act it out and see if the class can guess what your family value is.

Jess and John's family help to keep them safe when they play games online by teaching them how to respond when people are mean.

List or draw the people that help to keep you safe.

Tell your partner ...

- who each person is
- how they help to keep you safe

Take your picture home and talk to your family about your family values and ways you can keep safe online.
